Interactive training series: Applying CDC's Guideline for Prescribing Opioids

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) offers a free online interactive training series to help providers apply the CDC's recommendations for prescribing opioids. These standalone modules are self-paced and offer continuing education credits at no cost to the participant.

Training modules include:

- Addressing the Opioid Epidemic: Recommendations From the CDC.
- Treating Chronic Pain Without Opioids.
- Communicating With Patients.
- Reducing the Risks of Opioids.
- Assessing and Addressing Opioid Use Disorder.
- Dosing and Titration of Opioids: How Much, How Long, and How and When to Stop.
- Determining Whether to Initiate Opioids for Chronic Pain.
- Implementing the CDC's Opioid Prescribing Guideline in Clinical Practice.
- Opioid Use and Pregnancy.
- Collaborative Patient-Provider Relationship in Opioid Clinical Decision Making.
- Motivational Interviewing.

Access the training modules by visiting <https://www.cdc.gov/drugoverdose/training/online-training.html>.

Providers receive free continuing education for each training by registering on CDC Training and Continuing Education Online, searching for the corresponding course number, and completing the evaluation.
